

Staying Red:
why I remain a socialist

NORMAN HARDING

Index Books
London

© Norman Harding 2005

Published 2005 by Index Books
16 Electric Avenue, Brixton, London SW9 8JX

Typeset by Sumner Type, London SE22

Printed by Trade Union Printing Services, Newcastle upon Tyne

A C.I.P. catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

ISBN 1-871518-25-3

Dedication

This book is dedicated to all those throughout the world who are struggling for socialism, and to all those who are fighting against oppression. We need a society where social relations will mean that adequate food, clean water, clothing, and shelter will be available for all. A society where wealth (for example, oil) will not just benefit the rulers of these areas, but benefit all. A society with no national rulers using military might and superiority to invade any part of the world to steal its resources — as is happening now, in 2004, in Iraq.

Long gone are the days when a community was simply all the people living in an area, based on a local industry. Globalisation of capital and ownership means that the world is our community. The old slogan ‘Workers of the World Unite’ has never been more urgent and necessary.

Acknowledgements

I thank all my comrades and friends of the late Socialist Labour League and Workers Revolutionary Party for their support and encouragement over the five years writing this book.

Every attempt has been made to contact all those mentioned. If anyone has not been contacted, please accept my apologies.

Special thanks to Clare Cowen and Bridget Leach for their unstinting hard work, devotion and care taken with the finer points that were needed to arrive at the finished product, and to Brian Eley for designing the cover. Thanks and appreciation to Cathy Brown at the Micklefield BT Cyberstation for help and advice. Thanks to Paul Jennings (Australia) and the many others who helped.

Thanks to John Davies, Cliff Slaughter and Stephen Drury, who have constantly been available whenever I needed their special skills or just needed a chat.

Many thanks to my wife Pauline: without her support I may never have been able to start, never mind finish, this book. Thanks to our family who have always shown an interest in the book's progress and some pride in the fact that we will have it on the bookshelves.

CONTENTS

	What this book means to me	1
1	The Hardings	5
2	National Service in post-war Germany	20
3	Finding my feet politically	43
4	My early days in the Trotskyist movement	60
5	The Socialist Labour League	83
6	The Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament	94
7	Work in the tenants' and labour movement	104
8	Changing factories	128
9	Loscoe and the Normanton rent strike	151
10	From Executex to the British Museum	169
11	Working in London	180
12	The Redgraves	211
13	London and Baghdad	219
14	Raid on the school, Saturday 27 September 1975	224
15	Miners' Strike	236
16	Uncovering and overcoming the horror: 1984 to 1986	242
17	Australia	261
18	Back to Leeds	274
19	Summing up	288
	Index	290

